1 · Why the official list is not an answer

The GATE 2027 brochure introduces its list of Public Sector Undertakings with In the past, describes the organisations it names as those that used GATE scores “during the past few years”, ending with “etc.”. Three hedges in one paragraph is not accidental drafting.

This guide names no organisation as a current GATE recruiter. Where an organisation appears, it is inside a quotation of the brochure. The brochure cannot support such a claim, and IAE Academy holds no employer’s advertisement to cite in its place.

Search for PSU recruitment through GATE and the same roughly thirty names come back on page after page, usually undated and usually in the present tense. The list is real — it is on printed page 8 of the official brochure — but the tense is not. Section 5.3.2 opens “In the past, several Public Sector Undertakings (PSUs) have used candidate’s GATE score in their recruitment process.”

The organising institute is recording what has happened, hedging it twice, and closing with “etc.” so that no reader mistakes the list for a complete register. A page that drops those hedges is not summarising the brochure; it is asserting something the brochure declined to assert.

This matters because recruitment routes move between cycles, and a list cannot tell you when one has. An organisation that screened on GATE scores for several years may run its own examination the next year, or not recruit at all. The brochure has no mechanism for tracking that, which is exactly why it wrote the paragraph as history. Any document presenting the list as current is making a promise the source refused to make, and the candidate who plans around it carries the cost.

2 · Where the answer actually lives

GATE 2027 qualification does not assure a Public Sector Undertaking (PSU) job, and the brochure explains why: the outcome depends on the recruitment procedure of the concerned PSU. That sentence names the operative document, and it is not the brochure.

Section 9 on printed page 29 states “GATE qualification does not assure a Public Sector Undertaking (PSU) job, as it depends on the recruitment procedure of the concerned PSU.” Read the second half of that sentence as an instruction rather than a disclaimer. It tells you exactly which document settles the question for any given organisation: its own recruitment procedure, published in its own advertisement.

For central government posts the brochure is more specific still. “The details of the scheme of recruitment are usually published in national newspapers/Employment News/Rozgar Samachar by the concerned authority.” In both cases the brochure sends you to the recruiter. The checks below are what to do when you get there.

What the GATE 2027 brochure can settle about recruitment on a GATE score, and what only the recruiting organisation can

WHAT YOU ARE CHECKING	WHAT THE BROCHURE SAYS ABOUT IT	WHERE IT IS ACTUALLY SETTLED	PRINTED PAGE
Whether the brochure's PSU list is a forecast for 2027	It is not, by its own wording. The list is introduced with In the past and describes organisations that used GATE scores "during the past few years", ending with "etc.".	Nowhere in the brochure. A past-tense list is a record of what has happened, and cannot tell you what a given organisation will do in this cycle.	8
Whether qualifying in GATE is enough to get a PSU job	"GATE qualification does not assure a Public Sector Undertaking (PSU) job, as it depends on the recruitment procedure of the concerned PSU."	The brochure names the deciding document itself: the recruitment procedure of the concerned PSU, not the brochure and not any coaching institute's list.	29
Whether a particular organisation is recruiting on GATE this cycle	The brochure does not say, and does not claim to. Its only present-tense employment sentence concerns Group-A posts in the central government.	That organisation's own careers or recruitment page, and the advertisement itself. Nothing short of the live advertisement answers this.	8
Where a central government scheme is announced	"The details of the scheme of recruitment are usually published in national newspapers/Employment News/Rozgar Samachar by the concerned authority."	The publications the brochure names, and the notice issued by the authority conducting the recruitment.	8
Which GATE paper an advertisement will accept	The brochure does not address it. Choosing your paper is governed by section 6.2 and Table 4; which paper a recruiter accepts is not the brochure's subject.	The eligibility clause of the advertisement. A paper that suits your degree is not automatically a paper a given recruiter accepts.	Not stated
Whether it asks for the score or the marks	Section 8 defines the marks obtained out of 100 and the GATE score derived from them as separate things. There is no mention of an All India Rank anywhere in the brochure.	The selection clause of the advertisement, read against your own scorecard. Marks, score and any rank a recruiter cites are not interchangeable.	9, 27, 28
Whether your score is still valid when you apply	"GATE 2027 scorecard is valid for THREE years from the date of announcement of the results."	Your scorecard against the advertisement, which states the GATE years it accepts. Validity and acceptance are two different tests and both must pass.	28

4 · Score, marks and rank are not the same thing

The GATE 2027 brochure defines the marks obtained and the score derived from them, and makes no mention of an All India Rank anywhere. An advertisement asking for a rank is not asking for anything the brochure defines.

The GATE 2027 Information Brochure does not mention an All India Rank anywhere in its 143 pages. The word “rank” appears in the brochure only as matrix rank inside syllabus sections, as Rankine in the Civil syllabus, as the rank of Tahsildar in a certificate clause, and as “ranking” in one place, on printed page 9.

That one place concerns the GG and XH papers only. “For candidates appearing for the Geology and Geophysics (GG), and Humanities and Social Sciences (XH) papers, separate score and ranking will be provided based on their selection of sections.” The brochure adds that “Section-wise score and ranking will NOT be provided for other test papers”. Neither paper is one IAE Academy coaches, and neither has anything to do with a recruitment shortlist — which is the point. The brochure’s only use of ranking is a sectional matter for two papers, not a national ordering of candidates.

So when an advertisement specifies a cut-off, read carefully which quantity it names. Marks out of 100 and the GATE score are both defined in section 8 and they are different numbers; a rank, if one is cited, comes from the scorecard rather than from anything the brochure sets out.

5 · Frequently asked questions

Which PSUs will recruit through GATE 2027?

No honest document can tell you, including this one. The brochure names about thirty organisations on printed page 8, but writes the paragraph in the past tense and ends the list with “etc.” It then states that whether a GATE score leads to a job depends on the recruitment procedure of the concerned PSU. The answer for any one organisation lives in that organisation’s current advertisement and nowhere else.

Why does every other website publish the list as if it were current?

Because the list exists in an official document and is easy to copy. What gets dropped in the copying is the tense. The brochure’s own wording — In the past, “during the past few years”, ending with “etc.” — marks it as a historical and incomplete record.

Does the brochure say anything about an All India Rank?

The GATE 2027 Information Brochure does not mention an All India Rank anywhere in its 143 pages. Section 8 defines the marks obtained out of 100 and the GATE score derived from them, and the only place the brochure uses “ranking” is printed page 9, for the GG and XH papers. If an advertisement asks for a rank, read it against your scorecard rather than against the brochure.

My GATE score is valid for three years. Can I apply to any recruitment in that window?

Validity and acceptance are two different tests. “GATE 2027 scorecard is valid for THREE years from the date of announcement of the results.” That is a property of your scorecard. Which GATE years a particular recruitment accepts is stated in its advertisement, and can be narrower. Both have to pass.

Where are central government recruitments on GATE score announced?

The brochure answers this one directly. On printed page 8 it states “Direct recruitment to Group-A level posts in the central government such as Senior Field Officer (Tele), Senior Research Officer (Crypto) and Senior Research Officer (S&T) in Cabinet Secretariat, Government of India, is now being conducted based on GATE score.” and that “The details of the scheme of recruitment are usually published in national newspapers/Employment News/Rozgar Samachar by the concerned authority.” Note the present tense there, which the brochure does not use for the PSU paragraph beside it.
